Advocacy

In today's health care environment, dollars, health care professionals and resources of all kinds are severely stretched. Anyone ill or unable to speak up for himself or herself is at a severe disadvantage.

ad'vocacy, n.

Function of an advocate; pleading in support of.

ad'vocate, n.

One who pleads for another; one who speaks on behalf of; professional pleader ad'vocate, v.t.

Plead for, defend, recommend publicly

We all must have an advocate to ensure that we receive proper attention and that the most is made of whatever resources are available. Someone must be there to ensure that health problems are accurately and completely communicated to physicians.

Invariably this responsibility falls on the shoulders of families. But what happens when the family members are themselves frail, overburdened or unavailable?

INTEGRACare is here to speak on behalf of clients and to support those family members working in this extremely stressful environment.
